On January 21st, 2013, Hadiya Pendleton, a 15-year-old high school student from the south side of Chicago, marched in President Obama's 2nd inaugural parade. One week later, Hadiya was shot and killed.

Orange is the color a group of Hadiya's friends chose to wear to remember her life. They chose orange because that's what hunters wear in the woods to protect themselves and others.

What started in a south side high school to celebrate Hadiya has turned into a nationwide movement to honor all lives cut short by gun violence. Wear Orange is a celebration of life and a call to action to help save lives from gunfire. June 2 is National Gun Violence Awareness Day, and 2016 is going to be the biggest year yet.

Wear Orange was created to make it easier for people to show their support for common sense solutions that will save lives. If you believe there's more we can do to help end gun violence, wear orange on June 2nd and share on social media with #WearOrange.

Be Creative. Be Loud.
Wear Orange.
